Naps' Little Southpaw Allows but Five Hits-Engel Gets Away Poorly-Hughes Hit Hard Final Count 6-1.

By WILLIAM PEET.

Those Naps yesterday came right back after the licking we handed them Sunday, and, with the aid of some really brilliant pitching on the part of Southpaw Willie Mitchell, put the skids under the Climbers. it was all over, the figures read something like this:

Naps, 6: Nationals, 1. During the past two seasons Mitchell has never bothered the Na-tionals a whole lot, and his revenge was long overdue. He got it yes-terday, believe us. Only five hits was the Climbers' portion, and his support was glittering. Stops by Johnston and Turner bordered on the sensational and robbed the washington. AB. B. H. Moeller, rf. 2 0 0 Moeller, rf. 2 0 Moeller, rf. 2 0 0 Moeller, rf. 2 0 M

Maranville, Sensational Short stop of Braves, Was on Market Last Summer.

TOO SMALL, SAYS O'DAY

But Youngster Improves Under Stallings, and Now Is a Real

Three National League baseball clubs-Chicago. St. Louis, and Cincinnati-over-tooked a "godd het" last season when they declined to purchase Shortstop Maranville from the Boaton Braves. Any one of the three could have secured him for practically a song, but declined a "to consider him. Frank Chance, then manager of the Cubs. liked his fielding, but declared he would never be a hitter. Hank O'Day said he was too small, and Roger Bresnahan thought he was too weak with the bat. Chance would have given a big price to get a man like him this apring, and Miller Huggins could have used him to good advantage at the start of the season. Now Maranville is not on the market. He is a fixture of the Boston club.

One of the Smallest Infelders

Hoston club.

Gone of the Smallest Inficiders.

Maranville in one of the smallest inficiders in the league. He is the shortest shortstor. There are acyeral little men in the game today, but it is difficult to tell which of the group in the shortest. Tommy-Lench, of the Cube; Miller Ruggins of the Cardisale; Heine Grob, of the Reds; Callahan, of Brooklyn, and Moran, of Brooklyn, are all only a few inches shove five feet. If they were pfaced in a line it probably would be accertained there is not more than an line hifference in the group.

The Boston shortstop entered major league company last year. He renembled a wizard in chasing ground balls, but was not reunarkably accurate. At the plote he was pittfully week on a curve ball, and was an easy victim for pitchers; phasessing a big hook. This is what caused Chance and other insagers to seelare he would never be a batter. It is true he never will be a Hans Wagner or a Joe Tinker in handling the club, but he will rank with the average, and he is doing so at present. Maranville came from New Bodford, of the Connecticut League, and only on trial. When the Boston people saw him in action they decided they would keep him, and now are more than pleased.
